Steve Satchell should be on the three person panel.
A person with knowledge of the field and who has no stock in Micro$oft is the right type of person for the job.

Another thing is that DNA computer programming languages will completely exclude outside development. Micro$oft must share the genetic computer algorithms that it develops for the creation of independent applets and executable functions. Bill Gates has funded research into self replicating and self improving computer programs. Programs that quite literally write themselves. The programs are analogous to DNA because of its ability to mutate and reproduce endless quantities of complex code. This data must be shared! Otherwise,we'll be doing the trial again every decade with Micro$oft out lasting the Federal Government.

This is what Mr. Gates hopes will happen: You will allow further development at colleges without government supervision of what Micro$oft's Millionaires fund privately. These campus researchers will spin off their own companies to be bought up by Micro$oft as soon as the programs reach a BETA state.
